Fig. 5A illustrates a case when supplied encrypted data is displayed. The encrypted data is decrypted by a display permit key, and the data thus decrypted is displayed. Fig. 5B illustrates a case when supplied encrypted data is edited. The encrypted data is decrypted by an edit permit key, and the data thus decrypted is displayed, and then editing is performed. Fig. 5C illustrates a case when supplied encrypted data is stored. The encrypted data is decrypted by a storage permit key, and the data thus decrypted is displayed, and then, the decrypted data is encrypted again by the storing permit key, and then storing is performed. Thus, the data encrypted again is stored. Fig. 5D illustrates a case when supplied encrypted data is copied. The encrypted data is decrypted by a copy permit key, and the data thus decrypted is displayed and then, the decrypted data is encrypted again by the copy permit key, and then copying is performed. Thus, the data encrypted again is copied. Fig. 5E illustrates a case when supplied encrypted data is transferred. The encrypted data is decrypted by a transfer permit key, and the data thus decrypted is displayed and then, the decrypted data is encrypted again by the transfer permit key, and then transfer is performed. Thus, the data encrypted again is transferred. In these Figures, double-framed parts show that data is with encrypted.--;
